

Dear Mr. Lillienheim, Wednesday May 13
Thank you very much for coming to talk to our class. It was a very touching experience. I can imagine now how hard it was for you to go back and tell us about what was probably the hardest part of your life. I felt extremely special that you spent your time talking to ~~your~~ my class. I thought that because your story wasn't based mostly on the horror of the concentration camps, but rather on the friendships that you made. I especially liked when you told us about your memory when the two girls you befriended brought you a cup of soup and you said it was the nicest thing anyone had ever done for you. People wouldn't normally think of receiving a cup of soup as something nice someone had done, but it makes it very apparent how much struggling there was for things we take for granted so much such as food. I would just like to tell you how much I learned from your coming to class and telling us about your experience. I have read books about the Holocaust but this was the first time I ever heard a survivors' story first-hand, and I really enjoyed it. I hope that maybe we can keep in touch so I can hear more about you. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Emily R DeLoe

Mr. Lillien
