Dear Abby and Irene,

I really felt honored to be a part of the screening of your fine film, last week at Wilpower. It was an especially warm and personal documentary, and I found it to be very "real" as well. Knowing both Rob and Nancy quite well myself, I feel like you captured their incredible strengths and humanness as they deal with all they have to deal with, and make the most of it, in a way that is so much a model for us all.

This movie will help a lot of people understand mental illness too, (and perhaps help open more group homes when the NIMBY response occurs.)

Also one more rave comment. It was so finely constructed and made to be so real, but it flowed and was easy to watch, even beautiful at times. An awesome film, thanks for inviting me.
